An eco-friendly and socially responsible world tour to Promote self-sufficiency and alternative life choices

Search for happiness has become part of everyone's key life goals in the contemporary western society. Hyperspecialised jobs, urban and industrial concentration as well as promotion of disposable goods consumption dilute, drown or lose the actual value of things as well as their meaning. Meaning and value are two elements at the source of the long-lasting pleasure called happiness. Growing a measure of self-sufficiency at the individual level, becoming environmentally responsible, in matter of facts finding back this meaning and this value appears fundamental to us.

We travel across the world looking for happy alternative and self-sufficient lives and offer to share for free the techniques we discover and learn from farms and eco-venues. In fact, this is a French non-profit association and is also an internet platform www.alterculteurs.net with a video Library (Youtube channel Les vidéos Alterculteurs) and technical articles, portraits and venue recommendation created according our encounters about topics going from natural building to enery self-sufficiency as well as food production because we are convinced that it is by giving back autonomy to individuals within the respect of the resources we have to share that we can collectively improve things.

Who we are

With an engineer background, Ariane leaves her career in the industry in search for a lifestyle that suits her own values. Reorienting, she gets certified for organic vegetable farming and grows a strong interest about self-sufficiency as a way to give purpose and meaning in human lives. She loves to write, tell stories, draws a little and makes websites for projects she believes in. Happy with her hands in the soil, she is to become an organic farmer in her future farm.

Professional and enthusiastic video-maker and photographer, Thomas commits to projects in line with his own values against Monsanto, for the reindeers herders, for music and sharing. He is also an excellent cook, loves to explore homemade food transformation to preserve delicious food and to discover through these passions new cultures while traveling. « Bon vivant » and caring for people, he is to become the host of the farm accomodation and the chef to the farm table in his future farm.
